Open the map. Begin.
No right order, no wrong turn
as public space unfolds.
Pause. Breathe.

Look for traces—
how the city meets you,
what surfaces as you move.

Warm up as you go.
Coffee, tea, mittens, scarf.
Pause. Breathe.
Stay a while, find a bench.

Follow what draws you in:
small details, what lingers,
what shifts with attention.

Eventually find the Community Mural.
Step close. Step back.
Notice the traces of color,
how they meet your gaze.

Then, if you're willing, pause.
Take the short survey
(click or scan QR code).
It's quick, just a minute or two.

Your reflections help us notice
how art, feeling, and place
shape shared experience,
and invite us back
to curiosity,
again and again.
Breathe.

Learn more, take the survey, and leave your trace.

Look

Begin by looking for traces. Traverse City is shaped by water, and woods, and by the marks left through daily movement, care, and making. Some traces are visible—paint, stone, paths, structures—while others are quieter, held in memory or habit. The mural is one trace among many.

Wonder

Traces are noticed differently by each person. What one person pauses over, another may pass by. This map is made from bits and pieces that surfaced during the months we worked on the mural; small traces of place, encounters, and attention that gathered along the way. This map is not complete, but offered as a way to slow down and notice how creativity threads through the city and its landscape.

Discover

As you move, notice which traces hold your attention and why. Northern Michigan is full of art, formal and informal, permanent and fleeting. We invite you to add what you discover by sharing a photo, a link, or a short story of a trace that matters to you. Send contributions to curious@lookwonderdiscover.org, and help grow a shared record of how this place is seen.

Look Wonder Discover is a Gen Z-led 501c3 nonprofit rooted in Northern Michigan.

Our mission is simple:
to cultivate curiosity.

* LWD's Definition of Traces noun: a small sign that someone was here or paid attention—like a color chosen, a path taken, or a feeling noticed—left behind as part of being present.
